Logic

1. 12:59pm

2. The blind man's hat was white. He reasoned: "The first man obviously didn't see two green hats or else he would have immediately known that his hat was white since there are only two green hats. The second man then knew that the first did not see two green hats. Had the second man looked at me and saw a green hat, he would have been certain that his hat was white since the first man didn't see two green hats. Because he didn't know for certain the color of his hat, I can consequently deduce that the hat on my head is white."
